Technology and the need to stay in touch have fueled the growth of cell phones. These devices can provide voice calling, entertainment and web access at the click of a button. However, their disadvantages cannot be ignored as their problems influence people greatly.

Cell phone use is expensive. Added to that, are the costs of the hardware, text messaging, roaming and downloading. If service is unsatisfactory, your only option for ending service is to pay termination fees.

Cell phone can ring in the middle of movies, music concerts, plays and other areas where silence is required such as libraries. In addition, the glow of cell phone screens from text messages can annoy people in the darkness of a theater.

The use of cell phone while driving has caused so many accidents in the UAE that the government has prohibited calls and text messaging while driving, as the accidents of 2011.

Gone are the days of " getting away from it all". Cell phone makes it difficult to remain out of contact with bosses, friends and family members. Even if you turn of your ringer, callers can fill our voice mail and your text inbox with messages.

Cell phones send out low levels of RF(radio frequency) radiation. Large amounts of this energy can heat and damage tissues, especially around the eyes, which do not have enough blood flow to carry away such heat. There is no concern that cell phones might cause cancer, headaches, sleep problems and memory loss.

So , it is advisable to those who are addicted to mobile phones to have self control and use them only when necessary.
